90 Years Ago: Talkies Come to the Strand

By Steve Shaw

A Delaware Gazette headline on July 30, 1929 announced that “Talkies Will Open Soon In Local Theatre”. The Strand Theatre had been in business just 13 years when new technology started changing the way movies would be delivered. In 1927 Warner Brothers debuted what became known as the first “talkie”. It was the Jazz Singer starring Al Jolson. It was a hybrid that incorporated sound into a largely silent film. The new technology was a hit and it became apparent that movies with sound were the future. Just two years later the Strand invested in the technology needed to showcase the new era of films.

The Gazette article mentioned how the RCA Photophone system would allow the audience “to see famous stars to walk and talk, news events of the day would be presented in sound, and symphony orchestras would be presented with new life like effects....” For the Strand it meant employees would have to install and learn new technology. Work for musicians to accompany the silent movies would be a thing of the past. Movie goers would learn new courtesies of staying silent during speaking parts. The story on the screen could be moved along by sounds off the screen such as a door banging, wind blowing or hushed voices in another room.

On Monday August 5th 1929 you could be entertained by a new talkie for 30 cents at the Strand. The first movie with sound at the Strand Theatre was The Donovan Affair. The stars were Jack Holt and Dorothy Revier. Both of the stars managed the transition from silent films to talking movies. The director, Frank Capra, also made a successful transition from silent films to pictures with sound. Future credits included Mr. Smith Goes to Washington and It’s a Wonderful Life.

The Strand Theatre has remained a fixture in the Delaware community. It has since that time continued to adjust to changing tastes of entertainment and movie going. In the 1980’s it

2019 New Beginnings

Dear Friends,

It's still early in the year and we have had so much going on already. Our beloved Garth Oberlander Barn, which has beautified Stratford Road since 1848, underwent an amazing restoration over the last three months. Expert timberframers from northeast Ohio replaced damaged beams and columns as well as bents and sleepers (I didn't make those up – they are real barn timber terms). They were lucky to find old reclaimed wood from other barns that had been taken down. We are receiving a grant from the State of Ohio, which will cover most (but not all) of the expenses. Look for an announcement about a fundraiser dinner—The Banquet in the Barn, on Friday, June 28 from 5:30—8 pm, and you can see all the restorations in the historic barn which will allow our barn to be around for another 171 years.

Due to the temporary closing of the barn, our monthly programs have been held at the William Street United Methodist Church. They have been most accommodating and welcoming. The January program on American Indians was very well attended. In February, the church was filled to the brim as over 220 people attended our February program on the Underground Railroad, featuring our Curriculum Support Committee's Readers Theater. And our March program featured a Civil War reenactor in a masterful presentation.

As we prepare to shake off the long winter doldrums and welcome Spring, we are also welcoming the beginning of our busy wedding season at the Barn at Stratford. We celebrated the reopening of the Meeker Museum on April 28th with an exhibit on "Delaware County Great Beginnings" which features notable people from Delaware who got their start here. I bet you will be surprised at all the extraordinary individuals from Delaware who went on to do amazing things. The museum is open every Sunday from 2-5. Admission is free and we always welcome donations. Spring is about change and one big change is the addition of signage at the Meeker property, both on Stratford Road and US Route 23. Thanks to the generosity of the Delaware County Commissioners and the expert design and installation from Waterford

Signs, people will have no doubt where we are located.

For the first time ever, we are planning not just one but two summer camps for kids. Children are much more interested when they can be a part of living history. More information on those camps are in this newsletter. We are planning a "fun" raiser at the end of June. It will be a dinner with an historic twist and will feature a video about the barn restoration process. We are also looking forward to programs on Frederick Douglass, a tour of the Village of Stratford, and even one on boomerangs which will be held on the Meeker lawn.

Last year we were given the "Millworker Cottage" which is located at the end of Meeker Way on Stratford Road. Stratford resident Jake Ball has been working to fix the exterior as well as the flooring and it will be turned into a "look through the window" type of museum, giving a glimpse of what mid 1800s life was like in Stratford. We are truly fortunate to have talented people we can call on to help us in our preservation efforts.

If you would like to participate in these exciting new ventures, please let us know. We are always in need of volunteers, donations, members, and supporters. I promise you will not be bored!

Africa Road

By Donna Meyer

Africa Road – how did it get its name? That’s a question we are asked often. But to answer, we must travel back to Africa, Ohio. Now considered a “semi-ghost town”, Africa used to be known as East Orange, and was located on the east side of Alum Creek (which used to be an actual “creek”), near the intersection of Africa and Lewis Center/Big Walnut Roads. According to the 1880 Delaware County History, East Orange “did not seem to have any special founding”.

The Ohio Historic Marker, located at Alum Creek below the Dam Recreation Area off Lewis Center Road, east of South Old State Road tells the story of one of the most active individuals involved in the Underground Railroad. The text reads:

“Samuel Patterson arrived in East Orange in 1824 and, within a few years, began to hide runaway slaves in his home. He also invited anti-slavery speakers to the pulpit of the East Orange Methodist Church, which brought Patterson and his neighbors into conflict with the bishop. Following their consciences, they became Wesleyan Methodists and built a new church. A pro-slavery neighbor mocked them by calling their community Africa, and so East Orange was renamed. The village has disappeared, but several homes owned by Patterson and his neighbors still stand in this vicinity.

In 1859, slaves from a North Carolina plantation owned by the Alston family were sent north. The plantation's mistress had disapproved of slavery and made arrangements for the slaves to travel to Ohio and freedom. These slaves moved to the community of Africa, lived in log homes, were employed by the anti-slavery farmers, and joined the Wesleyan Methodist Church. After the Civil War the freed slaves left Africa and settled in the communities of Delaware and Westerville, and Van Wert and Paulding counties.”

One Underground Railroad station to the south of the Patterson home was in the Hanby House in Westerville. The Hanby’s were abolitionists and opened their home as a temporary stop for slaves escaping to Canada. Here, son Benjamin Hanby, an Otterbein College student, heard the story a slave had told about his sweetheart, Nelly Gray, who had been taken by slave-owners. He wrote a song which became the (then) well-known “Darling Nelly Gray”.

“One night I went to see her, but “She’s gone!” the neighbors say.

The white man bound her with his chain;

Historical Marker near Lewis Center and Africa Road

(Photo by Donna Meyer)

They have taken her to Georgia for to wear her life away,
As she toils in the cotton and the cane.”

Songs such as this and writings, like those of Ohioan Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin, sensitized northerners to the conditions of slavery and helped to initiate the anti-slavery movement. Hanby's home is now a historic landmark standing adjacent to the Otterbein University campus and his grave is in the nearby Otterbein Cemetery in Westerville, Ohio.

Much of Africa today is underwater due to the construction of Alum Creek Lake in 1976. Alum Creek State Park is an adjacent recreation area which receives over three million visitors annually. Because the town of Africa is located next to this park and located within sight of the Alum Creek Dam, many visitors will recognize the town and the road, but may not be aware of the area's historic significance.

Africa was "saluted" on the country music television show "Hee Haw" in 1973. At that time, it had a population of 16. It is thought to be the only town in the world named after the Underground Railroad.

To learn more about the Underground Railroad and the homes in the county which were thought to be on the route, please visit our website – www.delawareohiohistory.org and select the History Walks and Tours dropdown. Though most of the homes are now private, you can take a self guided driving tour.

World Wide Games

By Steve Schmitt

World Wide Games was founded in Delaware by Warren and Mary Lea Bailey in 1953. They had moved from Riverton, WV, to Delaware where Warren's brother Oscar and his wife Sara worked for Lynn and Katherine Rohrbough's Cooperative Recreation Service (CRS). CRS operated at the Rohrbough farm located on State Route 203 west of Delaware. Warren and Mary Lea rented a house on the Rohrbough's farm. Warren worked part-time for CRS and began making their initial six games in his shop in one of the spare rooms in the house.

The Rohrbough's purchased a farm on State Route 37 west of Delaware and established Homestead Acres where their employees could buy lots and build homes. They also built Holiday Hill on the property. Holiday Hills was a popular place for square dancing and other events. Warren and Mary Using two of the devices they manufacture, Mary Lea plays scoop golf while Warren uses a skill game that's a sort of one-man version of table tennis.

Lea built a house there and moved World Wide Games operations to the new house.

Both Warren and Mary Lea worked full time. Warren managed the design and production operations and was a talented woodworker with hardwood industry experience. His skills were reflected in the quality and durability of the games they produced. Mary Lea handled the bookkeeping and printed materials including instructions and catalogs. At its peak World Wide Games employed 10 people.

In 1966 they purchased the Holiday Hills building and moved operations out of their house. The building included fabrication and finishing shops and a showroom where games could be played and purchased. There was a large fireplace and Mary Lea Bailey usually kept a pitcher of orange Tang and cookies for visitors. The showroom was a fun place to spend an afternoon as many Delaware County residents will remember.

During over 30 years World Wide Games introduced new games and puzzles as well as related recreational materials such as books and pamphlets. Their 1955 Holiday catalog of games offered 18 games for sale. The last catalog in 1986 was 25 pages long with games, puzzles and toys. Their products were primarily manufactured by World Wide Games, but there were also games they imported from high-quality companies such as Brio of Sweden.

In 1986 the Baileys retired and sold World Wide Games to S&S Arts and Crafts of Colchester, CT. Production continued at the Delaware facility for another 12 years with daughter Linda Johnson managing the operations. Warren and Mary Lea enjoyed traveling during their retirement. Warren passed away in 2016. Mary Lea resides in Delaware and recently participated in a video-recorded oral history of World Wide Games with historian Steve Schmitt.

Steve Schmitt will be giving a presentation on World Wide Games at the May 16th meeting of the Delaware County Historical Society. Many examples of World Wide Games products will be available to play just like in the World Wide Games showroom.

The following have made financial donations to the Delaware County Historical Society between 10/1/18 and 3/15/19. Their generous donations will help us create programs and exhibits, preserve our historic buildings, and pass along our rich heritage to future generations. ## Vogel Lectures

Several DCHS board members and the Executive Director attended the Vogel Lecture given on Monday, April 8th at OWU's Hamilton-Williams Campus Center. Historian Julie Mujic presented 'A Vast Change Had Come Over the Streets': The Postwar Lives of World War I Veterans. Mujic's presentation represents Ohio Wesleyan's 35th annual Joseph and Edith Vogel Lecture sponsored by the Department of History.

The Vogel Lecture is made possible by a generous gift from their son, Ezra F. Vogel, Ph.D. (shown here in photo), a 1950 Ohio Wesleyan graduate, native of Delaware, and retired professor of East Asian Studies at Harvard University. Vogel is also a DCHS life member and supporter of the Society.

Black Soldier Comes to Life

By Steve Shaw

The Black Soldier in the Civil War Comes to Life Through Historic Reenactment

On March 21st Anthony Gibbs from the Ohio History Connection brought history to life. Mr. Gibbs is a teaching artist bringing history alive through character reenactments. Mr. Gibbs brought a historical perspective of the average black soldier. The social and historical background that led to America's Civil War were summarized. Slavery of blacks was the cause of numerous conflicts in the country during the mid 19th century, one example being the Dred Scot Decision of 1857 that determined slaves in a free state were still considered property of their owners. The beginning of the Civil War in 1861 brought the issue of slavery to the forefront. From the beginning of the war, blacks offered to volunteer to fight the war. Questions were raised on their ability to be a soldier and their willingness to fight. Freed blacks, former slaves, and even blacks from Canada had to fight for the honor of serving their country. Mr. Gibbs explained that the motivation to enter this struggle were centered on principals of freedom, equality and citizenship. By 1862 the legal basis to establish colored infantry regiments was in place. The next step was enlistment and organization of units of colored infantry. The 54th and 55th Massachusetts Colored Volunteer Infantry proved that the concerns about the ability to be good soldiers and the willingness to fight were misguided and they were quickly proved wrong. Mr. Gibbs described County listed at least 11 Delaware County natives that were part of the 55th Massachusetts Colored Volunteer Infantry.

The gallant efforts of the 54th and 55th infantries paved the way for more units of freed African Americans. The 5th United States Colored Infantry was organized and trained at Camp Delaware just southeast of the city. Thirty soldiers were from Delaware.

The same 1908 Delaware County History accounted for 56 African Americans that served militarily during the Civil War.

June 1929 article in the Delaware Gazette announced that Adoniram Warrick had passed away. Mr. Warrick was the last surviving soldier from the 5th United States Colored Volunteer Infantry in the local Grand Army of the Republic (GAR) post. He is buried in Oak Grove cemetery.
